"Pastel Landscape Workshop"
Color and Light: Application to the Landscape

Wednesday & Thursday

July 20 & 21, 2016

9:00 AM to 4:00 PM

Larry Blovits

The illuminating light characteristics affect how the artist perceives colors in the landscape. The next step is to mix the appropriate hue and saturation to match the light's effect on the color. Recognizing and mixing the correct hue, saturation, value, and temperature, and combining that with a particular light source enable the artist to create a powerful and beautiful statement. There will be demonstrations and discussions on related techniques, procedures, and materials as well as personal attention. Participants will be given pre-workshop assignments two weeks in advance. We will work inside using your own 8"x 10" photographs as a source.

Larry Blovits received his BFA and MFA degrees at Wayne State University, Detroit, in 1964 and 1966 respectively. Retiring in 1993 after 26 years as professor of art at Aquinas College in Grand Rapids, he is a full-time artist specializing in portrait and landscape painting, private commissions, and teaching workshops across the country and abroad (recently in Australia and New Zealand). He is featured in a number of books and articles, and also authored two books (one on pastel and one on sketching and drawing). The Pastel Society of America honored Larry with the title of Master Pastelist in 1996. His artwork is represented in the collections of many Michigan colleges and one in Rhode Island, as well as many public and private collections. A professional portrait artist, his commissions can be found in a number of Michigan colleges, universities, hospitals, and public institutions. www.larryblovits.com.
